LITTLE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT BOB DYLAN

- Bob Dylan's standard order at Hibbing's local luncheonette was cherry pie á la mode.
- Dylan's uncles owned movie theatres in Hibbing, Minnesota, meaning a young Zimmerman got to watch films for free.
- Dylan never had a number 1 single. "Like a Rolling Stone" and "Rainy Day Women" reached number 2 on the Billboard charts in 1965 and 1966 but none of his 58 singles managed to reach the top.
- Dylan's Hibbing High principal deemed his act too outrageous for the school talent show, pulling the curtain on the Grade 10 student due to the "unsuitable" nature of the music.
- As his parting note in the 1959 Hibbing High School Yearbook, Robert Zimmerman summarized his ambition thusly: "To join Little Richard."
- Before flunking out of the University of Minnesota, Dylan pledged Sigma Alpha Mu.

Hibbing, Minnesota unveiled a new public art tribute to Bob Dylan this month to recognize one of the Iron Range town's most famous residents.

Dylan was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 2016. The new display is located outside Hibbing High School, where Dylan graduated in 1959.

On one side of the display, a brick wall features the announcement of the Nobel Prize.

The opposite side of the wall features a series of stainless-steel panels that contain lyrics from more than 50 of Dylan's songs.

A group of L&M Radiator's employees worked with the Hibbing Dylan Project organization to create these five panels on L&M's laser cutter, volunteering hundreds of hours of programming time along with cleaning and buffing the panels. The job was completed the afternoon before the unveiling.

Hibbing employees Matt Hartl, Nick Ebert, Dennis Anderson, Sara DeMerse and Clayton Brown worked together to complete the graphics for this intense and challenging project.

Dylan, a singer-songwriter and author, is often regarded as one of the greatest songwriters of all time.

The street, that runs past Dylan's childhood home and the tribute site, has been re-named in his honor. The tribute has an open environment concept for people to sit, reflect and let their creative ideas flow.
